

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a construction safety device designed for use on construction sites where man-made holes are present. The new safety device is 5 constructed of high-impact resistant polyethylene, and is highly durable. The device is sized to fit snugly in construction holes, and can be walked on. It protects workers from hazards presented by holes, and keeps the holes clear of debris.